Subject: Dominion revealed to be a SHAM

Hello Jack,

This is Mark Finchem. I am the Election Integrity Patriot fighting the fraud in Arizona. And news is breaking big.

If you recall, their failures and fraud go all the way back to the 2020 election. After being called out on this, Dominion sued FOX news.

Well, now the chickens are coming home to roost.

It turns out, not only did we have an issue with Dominion. It turns out Dominion's own employees new there were significant problems.

The Gateway Pundit reports:

Discovery in this case revealed that Dominion's own employees expressed serious concerns about the security of its machines.

Mark Beckstrand, a Dominion Sales Manager, confirmed that other parties "have gotten ahold of [Dominion's] equipment illicitly" in the past. Beckstrand identified specific instances in Georgia and North Carolina and testified that a Dominion machine was "hacked" in Michigan. Beckstrand confirmed that these security failures were "reported about in the news."

And just weeks before the 2020 presidential election, Dominion's Director of Product Strategy and Security, Eric Coomer, acknowledged in private that "our shit is just riddled with bugs." Indeed, Coomer had been castigating Dominion's failures for years. In 2019, Coomer noted that "our products suck." He lamented that "[a]lmost all" of Dominion's technological failings were "due to our complete f— up in installation."

And in another instance, he identified a "critical bug leading to INCORRECT results." Ex.H4, Coomer Email (Jan. 5, 2018). He went on to note: "It does not get much worse than that." Id. And while many companies might have resolved their errors, Coomer lamented that "we don't address our weaknesses effectively!"*

Let me get this straight. Dominion's own employees have expressed concerns that:

- Machines are not secure

- Machines have been hacked before
- Machines are "riddled with bugs"
- According to employees, their "products s*ck."
- They failed at installing machines
- Their failures led to incorrect results.

What more do we need? Well, what we need is a new election! We must not rely on failed, faulty, and fraudulent third party vendors.

This is why I continue to fight back in the courts to make sure that our elections are protected and so that the fraud will finally end!
