Jack Venrick

From: "Jack Venrick" < jacksranch @skynetbb.com>
To: < jacksranch @skynetbb.com>
Sent: Thursday, August 16, 2007 4:23 PM
Attach: Environmental Rip Off of Rural Landowners.eml

Washington State Department of Tyranny, DOT Strikes Again

Looking west on SE 416th & 244th Ave SE

To: Property Owners, Enumclaw City, Freedom Movement, Senator Roach & Staff, Representative Chris Hurst & Staff, Staff, Representative Dan Roach & Staff, WA House and Senate, Media, WA State Supreme Court Justices

The Department of Tyranny (DOT) is back again. We know this drill. Olympia and Washington D.C use it all the time. time. Please see the front page of "The Enumclaw Courier-Herald" below. Thank your "Enumclaw Courier-Herald" for for keeping your eyes wide open for the community.

Here we have another attempt by the State to install a million dollar green roundabout for humans in the rural areas, IN IN ADDITION TO, an attempt by King County one mile away, to install a half million dollar (avg.) green concrete bunker "roundabout" for fish in a dry ditch.

- Senator Roach and staff are on their white horses, riding hard leading the charge against the DOT.
- We are hoping, Representative Chris Hurst and his 31st Calvary will join up to head the DOT off at the pass.
- Representative Lynn Schindler of the 4th Calvary has had the same experience with this repeat offender in her Spokane District.
- Are there others who can help?

None are so blind as the Washington State DOT people in Olympia. Their arrogance renders them not only deaf, dumb dumb and blind but displaying borderline behavior including over aggressive, harassing and stalking of communities who who do not want them. King County DDES also comes to mind, also. All of the green government departments, e.g. WA DOE, DNR, DFW, etc. who think they can steam roll over private property owners as many times as they want, want, need to be jerked up and out.

This is criminal behavior considering the millions of dollars, hundreds of communities and thousands of lives each of these agencies is bulling and busting.

Those working behind the scenes who are pulling these strings, need to be severely disciplined, including criminal charges of fraud. WEC, 1000 Friends of Washington/Futurewise/CELP/Autobahn and others frequently join in the shark shark attack on rural areas. Legislation creating these takings must be undone.

The taking of private property, including taxing wages, private land and private homes is not only unconstitutional, it is is fraudulent. Government needs to be held accountable for all the damage they do, both physical and emotional. America is slow to react but fast to wake up once disturbed enough.

Rural property owners are rubbed raw with green government takings. We are slow to anger and react. We love our land land and never wish harm on anyone. We have better things to do, besides fighting our own government to use our own own land. However, once taken, shame on you, twice taken shame on me, many times taken is shame on King County and Washington State and the federal government behind funding some of this nonsense. Million dollar roundabouts for for humans or half million dollar roundabouts for fish, are all a green nonsense taking of private property including the including the unconstitutional taxing of our private property including our wages.

Please see Ron Ewart's email attached above.

I would like to suggest the following to those senators and representatives whose constituents have had similar experiences of green takings by arrogant departments such as DOT, DOE, DFW, DNR. Olympia needs to find a way to to at least limit, preferably stop government from disrespecting rural sovereignty, private property rights, rural independence, rural free choice in their own affairs including.

Let me be perfectly clear. Property owners especially in the rural areas not only get a say, they are the "say". No other government agency or non government group, has the final veto. Rural property owners should be given final absolute veto power over any green taking. No green camel nose under the tent.

There are probably thousands of cases of this sort of government strong arming in Washington State alone. The Citizens Citizens Alliance for Property Rights and National Association of Rural Land Owners have unending stories of abject government criminal behavior. Nationwide it is staggering. I even witnessed it twice here in Washington State, Pierce Pierce County District and Superior Court by two different judges against an innocent land owner. The courts are colluding with the party line. That is a recipe for not only tyranny, but a rising citizenship defiance of all government. We have trespassing signs going up around the rural areas and the word is out no government people are welcome. If you you are green, you are mean, stay out.

The bottom-line is, a free country does not force anyone to do anything against their will within the framework of natural natural and constitutional law. The courts have become as corrupt and agenda driven as the other branches and departments of government. Anyone with half a brain can see this. One high court in one state rules the opposite of another high court in another state on the same basic constitutional law? State constitutions are different but they all under the U.S. Constitution. Why does the low court ignore the high court land mark rulings? Why cannot anyone see see what a growing number of property owners and constitutional patriots are experiencing?

We have progressive law not constitutional law. We have progressive legislation, not limited legislation based on very basic laws like natural law, common law, constitutional law, God's law. We have progressive executive orders, not limited guidance. Consequently, we have become a nation of progressive takers by force.

Freedom and liberty are the antithesis of what we have become. These departments use force, control and manipulation manipulation not free choice.

It is easy to see when you have been taken. It is near impossible to see when you are the taker. Strange isn't it? There is is an simple test to tell who is the taker and who is the taken, if you are confused. Many seem to be.

- Ask yourself or better yet, ask the party you are taking from, am I using free choice or force?
- Am I spending my life, setting people up or giving them absolute free choice?
- Why do I have to force my department on others when they say go away?
- Why do I know best over other people lives?
- Why can't I let local communities and rural areas plan their own lives and property?
- Why does the government have more power than the property owners?
- Why is the government upside down and backwards?

I have come to following epiphany, if you will, during these two years trying to understand why America has been taken. taken.

- How can you force anyone to do anything?
- If you think have to use force upon others for their best good, why is it good?
- You cannot regulate your own child, let alone a free spirit.
- You cannot train a human unless they allow you too.
- You can brainwash and be quite successful for a while.
- If you invoke force to legislate, judicate, administrate, regulate, and...
  - o if you are lucky, you will live enough to experience what happens when you bridle a free spirit.
  - or brainwash a nation by encourage them to take instead of create

Something dreadful happened, when our Founding Fathers walked away from Philadelphia, over 200 years ago.

- They had a vision.
- They laid it out on paper and celebrated.
- Then America promptly disregarded the vision of free choice and went straight for the throat of free force.
- A merica has been in a pool of blood and tears ever since.
- Despite all this, America has become a "prosperous" nation, miraculously and despite these takings
  - Although founded on free choice...
  - America increasingly is forcing its own people...
  - o to do what they don't want to do or have to do.

Can you imagine what this country would be like, if we only used free choice not free force?

Jack Venrick
How blind can we be
Not to be free
Not knowing the difference
Between free choice and tyranny
Enumclaw, WA
August 16, 2007

"We can easily forgive a child who is afraid of the dark, the real tragedy of life is when men are afraid of the light" Plato

Zen Calendar

December 29, 2006

Despite popular helaid. The much-discussed numbered considered for a rural stretch of highway north of Sunnice has these scrapped.  No one is saying it still be half by the Department of Transportation - # just seems that the idea is all being contemplated.  And that's enough to send state Sen. Pem Roach, R-31st District, into full organizational mode, planning another opportunity for distants to weigh in on the roundistout.  The last time the DOT gave the public the chance to speak on the roundatout - which was percicled in for the intersection of state Route 168 and Southeast 41 dist Street - citzens offered a recording ma.  Following that, it appeared the OT gave backing of the roundatout plan. But a recent message modern the roundatout issue is still on the table.  A roundatout is a ratific design system used at intersections to relace the number of rear-end and "T-tool" plan actions of the table.  A roundatout is a ratific design system used at intersections to relace the number of rear-end and "T-tool" plan actions of the rearrange of the recent of the recen	north of Enumoise hash been scrapped.  No no its sign grill still be built by the Department of Transportation - it just seems that the idea is still being contemplated.  And that's enough is sent dates Sen. Pan Rosel, R. 3 for District, into full organizational mode, planning another opportunity for citizens to weigh in on the roundatout - which was prevailed to the planning another opportunity for citizens for sensy in on the roundatout - which was prevailed to the planning and the roundatout plan. But a recent message received by Seach - letin on an investering machine by Transportation official Ruse East, makes it clear the roundatout issue is still on the table.  A roundatout is a ratific design system used at intersections to reduce the number of rear-end and "1-bone" type acidetesis. Instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follows a circular pain through a junction.  The Department of Transportation arined at the roundatout plan after determining the SR 190 intersection has been the scene for too many accedence. DOT engineers operities of an ownshout instead of traditic lights and had taken early steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adament, outspoken opponents of the roundatout instead of traditic lights and had taken early steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT planning to the public public public and the scene.  Recent Friday atternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's brinking on the lease.  After 'a list of discussion and further investigation,' East said, the DOT worts to obtain the lease after the research.  The become fries have been accepted when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's brinking on the lease.  After 'a list of discussion and further investigation,' East said, the DOT worts.  The second trails are select	north of Enumdaw heart been scrapped.  No one is saying it still be but by the Department of Transportation - it just seems that the idea is still being contemplated.  And thirds arough to seed states San. Pan Reach, R-31st Traintic, time full organizational mode, planning another opportunity for citizens to weigh in on the roundabout - which was pencified in the ministection of state Rotus 166 and Southeast 40 fill Stiller - citizens offered a percendent in the ministection of state Rotus 166 and Southeast 40 fill Stiller - citizens offered a percendent in the ministection of state Rotus 166 and Southeast 40 fill Stiller - citizens offered a percendent in the ministection of state of the roundabout plan. But a recent message expendent in the product of the roundabout plan is a recent message of the roundabout is stated that the state of the roundabout is seen at a state of the state of the state of the state of the roundabout is seen at a state of the	north of Etumolan haant been scapped.  No one is saying 11 still be built by the Department of Transportation - it just seems that the idea is still being contemplated.  And that's enough to send state San. Pam Roach, R. 31st District. into full organizational mode, planning another opportunity for citizens to weight nor in the roundabout.  The last time the DOT gave the public the chance to speak on the roundabout - which was penaled in for the intersection of state Route 160 and Southeast 416th Street - citizens offered a resourcing fruit.  Following that, it appeared the DOT was backing off the roundabout plan. But a recent message reserved by Roach. Year on an entering mentils by Transportation official Russ East, makes it distinct the roundabout is all ratio on the table.  A roundabout is a traffic design system used the intersections to reduce the number of rear-end as challenged in the table.  A roundabout is a traffic design system used the intersection to reduce the number of rear-end as challenged planticion.  The Department of Transportation arrived at the roundabout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the seene of too many accidents. DOT enginees opted for a roundabout instead of untall cliphs and had tables neity stips in the roundabout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the seene of too many accidents. DOT enginees opted for a roundabout roundabout consept.  It is seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorens Eng. Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday almenon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thrisking on the issue.  After 'to tot of discussion and further investigation.' East said, the DOT was to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to work		Print this story - Email this story is still being contemplated.  And marts enough to send state Sen. Pam Raach, R-31st District, into full organizational mode, planning another opportunity for citizens to weight nor the countidatout.  The last time to DCT give the public the chance to appaid to the proundatout a which was parcided in for the intersection of stals Route 169 and Southeast 416th Street - citizens offered a resounding for.  Following that, it appears that DCT was backing off the novorlabout plan. But a rownt message received by Roads - left on an answering machine by Transportation official Russ East, makes it clear the roundabout issue is still on the table.  A roundabout is a traffic design system used at intersections to reduce the number of rare and and "1-bone" type accidents. Indeed of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular part brough a junction.  The Department of Transportation arrived at the roundabout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the scene at son many accidents. DCT engineers spad for a montational plan and the plan and the plan and the proper schools the public gold wind or the DCT plan.  Roads and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DCT's Lorena Eng. The letter never promised the roundabout time was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoom nessage from East to Roads confirmed the DCT's Lorena Eng. The letter never promised the roundabout time was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoom nessage from East to Roads confirmed the DCT's thinking on the issue.  After 'a bit of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DCT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain conviced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  The bottom line is they still want a coundabout," Roads said, "they're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district tak	is still being contemplated.  And hards enough to send states Sen. Pam Rosch, R-31st District, into full organizational mode, planning another opportunity for citizens to weight in on the touridateout.  The last sim the DOT gave the public the chance to peake on the provinciblout is which was pennoted in for the intersection of state Route 169 and Southwast 416th Street - citizens offered a resounding "no."  Following that, it appearsed the DOT was backing off the roundatous plan. But a recent message received by Roach - iten on an awarvering machine by "Transportation Gills Russ East, makes it clear the roundatout is a traffic design system used at intersections to reduce the number of rear-end and "1-bone" type accidents. Instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular path frough a junction.  The Department of Transportation arrived at the roundatout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the socree of to many accidents. DOT emplemes opered for a roundatout instead of traffic lights and had taken early steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundatout concept.  It seemed the icke had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Englished the risks and the roundatout disease dead, however.  The secent Frisky afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's Lorena Englished the risks and the roundatout disease dead, however.  The secent frisks y afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's Lorena Englished the risks and the received of the risks of the received of the intersection.  The bostom line is they still want a roundatout." Roach said: "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The research vivous districts to be asid, remain convinced the roundatout at an earlier meeting.  It research the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.	is still being contemplated.  And hards enough to send states Sen. Pam Rosch, R-31st District, into full organizational mode, planning another opportunity for citizens to weight in on the touridateout.  The last sim the DOT gave the public the chance to peake on the provinciblout is which was pennoted in for the intersection of state Route 169 and Southwast 416th Street - citizens offered a resounding "no."  Following that, it appearsed the DOT was backing off the roundatous plan. But a recent message received by Roach - iten on an awarvering machine by "Transportation Gills Russ East, makes it clear the roundatout is a traffic design system used at intersections to reduce the number of rear-end and "1-bone" type accidents. Instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular path frough a junction.  The Department of Transportation arrived at the roundatout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the socree of to many accidents. DOT emplemes opered for a roundatout instead of traffic lights and had taken early steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundatout concept.  It seemed the icke had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Englished the risks and the roundatout disease dead, however.  The secent Frisky afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's Lorena Englished the risks and the roundatout disease dead, however.  The secent frisks y afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's Lorena Englished the risks and the received of the risks of the received of the intersection.  The bostom line is they still want a roundatout." Roach said: "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The research vivous districts to be asid, remain convinced the roundatout at an earlier meeting.  It research the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.	And that's anough to send state Sen. Pam Roach, R-31st District, into full organizational mode, planning another opportunity for citizens to weigh in on the crundabout.  The last time he DOT gave the public the chance to speak on the roundabout - which was pecialism in for the OT severation of sister Rouse 169 and Southeast 416th Street - citizens offered a resounding not.  Following that, it appeared the DOT was backing of the troundabout jobs. But a recent message received by Roach—it end on an answering machine by Transportation official Ruse East, makes it clear the roundabout issue is still on the table.  A roundabout is sufficially the still one of the still office the roundabout issue is still on the table.  A roundabout is sufficially the still office the still office of the still office planning another opportunity for citizens to veigh in on the roundabout.  The last time the DOT gave the public the chance to expeak on the roundabout which was pennised in for the intersection of state Routle 169 and Southeast 416th Street - citizens offered a resounding "not."  Following that, it appeared the DOT was backing of the roundabout plan, but a tracent message received by fowach - left on an answering machine by Transportation official Russ East, makes it dear the roundabout issue is still on the table.  A roundabout is a traffic design postern used at intersections to reduce the number of transportation and "T-tone" type accelerors. Indicated of meeting at a faditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular path through a junction.  The Department of Transportation arrived at the roundabout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the scene of too many accidents. DOT engineers opted for a roundabout related of training legists and had tables engly steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout connect.  It is exement the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Englier letter never promised the roundabout deawas dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's Lorena Englier letter never promised the roundabout, and the sizes.  After 1s till of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue leading to the provision of the sizes.  After 1s till of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue leading to the provision of the intersection.  The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said, "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what the amounts to."  The senator has long oriticated the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conjune" meeting, a few said	planning another opportunity for citizens to veigh in on the roundabout.  The last time the DOT gave the public the charce to a peak on the countablout which was periolised in for the intersection of state Route 169 and Southeast 416th Street - citizens offered a resourcing "no."  Following that, it appeared the DOT was backing of the roundabout plan, But a rocet message received by Nooth - left on an answering machine by Transportation official Russ East, makes it dear the roundabout issue is still on the table.  A roundabout, is a traffic design system used at intersections to reduce the number of rear-end and "bore" type accidents. Instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular path through a junction.  The Department of Transportation arrived in the roundabout plan size demining the RF 159 interest of the properties of the roundabout instead of traffic lights and had taken early steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her first invert promised the roundabout lide was dead, however.  The recent Friday elemenon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's brinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Furnicake Plateau, is especially perved that the DOT has not considered the politic promise and the properties of the promise of the promise of the	planning another opportunity for citizens to veigh in on the roundabout.  The last time the DOT gave the public the charce to a peak on the countablout which was periolised in for the intersection of state Route 169 and Southeast 416th Street - citizens offered a resourcing "no."  Following that, it appeared the DOT was backing of the roundabout plan, But a rocet message received by Nooth - left on an answering machine by Transportation official Russ East, makes it dear the roundabout issue is still on the table.  A roundabout, is a traffic design system used at intersections to reduce the number of rear-end and "bore" type accidents. Instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular path through a junction.  The Department of Transportation arrived in the roundabout plan size demining the RF 159 interest of the properties of the roundabout instead of traffic lights and had taken early steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her first invert promised the roundabout lide was dead, however.  The recent Friday elemenon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's brinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Furnicake Plateau, is especially perved that the DOT has not considered the politic promise and the properties of the promise of the promise of the	planning another opportunity for citizens to weigh in on the roundabout.  The last time the DOT gave the public the channes to speak on the roundabout - which was penciled in for the intersection of state Route 159 and Southeast 416th Street - citizens offered a resounding "no."  Following that, it appeared the DOT was backing off the roundabout plan. But a recent message received by Roads - left on an arwaying machine by Transportation official Russ East, makes it clear the roundabout state is still on the table.  A roundabout is a traffic design system used at intersections to reduce the number of rear-end and "1-bone" type accidents, inclead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular path through a junction.  The Department of Transportation prived at the coundboat given after retermining the SR 169 and and table of traffic lights and had taken early steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roads and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorens Eng. Her letter never promised the roundabout little was dead; however.  The recent Fridary afternoon message from East to Roads however.  The recent Fridary afternoon message from East to Roads chord/mered the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout of an earlier meeting.  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Erumdaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Erumdaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Erumdaw Plateau penciled in for the interfaction of state Route 169 and Southesat 416th Street - otitizene offered a resounding for.*  Following that, it appeared the DOT was backing off the roundabout plan. But a recent message received by Roach - left on an answering machine by Transportation official Russ East, makes it clear the roundabout issue is still on the table.  A roundabout is a ratific elegan yestem used at intersections to reduce the number of rear-end and "T-bone" type accidents, instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular path through a junction.  The Department of Transportation arrived at the roundabout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the scene of too many accidents. DOT engineers opted for a roundabout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the scene of too many accidents. DOT engineers opted for a roundabout of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday aftermoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After 1st of officiacusion and further investigation.* East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district take is all of the Enumciaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not concidered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier neeting.  "Tresent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so hes coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting, Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting o	penciled in for the interfaction of state Route 169 and Southeaut 416th Street - citizens offered a resounding foc.*  Following that, it appeared the DOT was backing off the roundabout plan. But a recent message received by Roach - left on an answering machine by Transportation (Girlie Russ State, tankes it clear the roundabout issue is still on the table.  A roundabout is a traffic design yeather used at intersections to reduce the number of rear-end and "T-bone" type accidents, instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a cruciur part through a junction.  The Dipartment of Transportation arrived at the roundabout plan after determining the ST. 150 intersection that between the content of the machine part of the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout instead of traffic lights and hald taken early steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her letter never promised the roundabout cleas was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoom message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a bot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumchau Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the manner in which the DOT has not considered the manner in which the DOT has for the progressions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" meeting, after said, one which allows the public to speak and	penciled in for the interfaction of state Route 169 and Southeaut 416th Street - citizens offered a resounding foc.*  Following that, it appeared the DOT was backing off the roundabout plan. But a recent message received by Roach - left on an answering machine by Transportation (Girlie Russ State, tankes it clear the roundabout issue is still on the table.  A roundabout is a traffic design yeather used at intersections to reduce the number of rear-end and "T-bone" type accidents, instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a cruciur part through a junction.  The Dipartment of Transportation arrived at the roundabout plan after determining the ST. 150 intersection that between the content of the machine part of the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout instead of traffic lights and hald taken early steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her letter never promised the roundabout cleas was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoom message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a bot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumchau Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the manner in which the DOT has not considered the manner in which the DOT has for the progressions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" meeting, after said, one which allows the public to speak and	penciled in for the intersection of state Route 168 and Southeast 416th Street - citizens offered a resounding "no".  Following that, it appeared the DOT was backing off the roundsbort plan. But a recent message received by Roads - left on an aswering machine by Transportation official Russ East, makes it clear the roundsbort issue is still on the table.  A roundsbort is a traffic design system used at intersections to reduce the number of rear-end and "f-bone" type accidents. Instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular path irrotopia junction.  The Department of Transportation arrived at the roundsbout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the scene of too many accidents. DOT engineers opted for a roundsbout but for the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundsbout concept.  It is seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Englier letter never promised the roundsbout idea was dead, however.  The recent fraidy afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's Lorena Englier letter never promised the roundsbout idea was dead, however.  The recent fraidy afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a bill of discussion and further investigation." East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundsbout is the best solution for the intersection.  The bottom line is they still want a roundsbout, 'Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway.' That's what this amounts to:  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumdaw Plateau, is especially prevent that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundsbout an earlier meeting.  "I seem the fact that he (East) ddn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming bone had in a earlier meeting.  "I have a said the said of the said that the proposition of the proposition of t received by Roach - left on an answering machine by Transportation official Russ East, makes it clear the roundabout is a traffic design system used at intersections to reduce the number of rear-end and "1-bone" type accidents. Instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular path through a function.  The Department of Transportation arrived at the roundabout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the scene of too many accidents. DOT engineers opted for a roundabout process. The process of the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Englier left enter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further: Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout." Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyws, "That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaey Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I sesent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long critical the manner in which the DOT has be sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentally.  She rails against meeting shat stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread througho	received by Roach - left on an answering machine by Transportation official Russ Stats, makes it clear the roundabout is as traffic design system used at intersections to reduce the number of rear-end and "T-bore" type accidents, include a large of the properties of the roundabout instead of traffic lights and had taken early steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng-lefer letter rever promised the roundabout size was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the Issue.  After a lot of discussion and further investigation." East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bendrum line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district these, in ead of the Erundabe Plateau, is especially perced that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I sesent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she caid.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm gaing to hold the gave!"	received by Roach : left on an anxentering machine by Transportation official Russ East, makes it clear the roundabout is a traffic design system used at intersections to reduce the number of rear-end and "T-brone" by peacedions, instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular path through a junction.  The Department of Transportation arrived at the non-date of junn ther determining the SR 109 intersection had been the connect from many accidents. DOT engineers opened for a roundabout instead of traffic lights and had laten engly steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOTs Lorens Eng. Her interior promised the roundabout des was dead, however.  The recent Firday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOTs thinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, is east, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The sensor, whose destite less in all of the Enumdav Plateau, is especially peered that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting,  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The sensor has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meeting that strated over several hours and have DOT	received by Roach - left on an answering machine by Transportation official Russ East, makes it clear the roundabout is as traffic design system used at intersections to reduce the number of rear-end and "T-hore" by eaccidents. Instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular path through a junction.  The Department of Transportation arrived at the roundabout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the scene of too many accidents. DOT engineers opted for a roundabout instead of traffic lights and find taken early signs in the project before the public got wind of the DOT pain.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's brinking on the issue.  Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumchaw Plateau, is especially perved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting, Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening that search you'de and conquer "mertally, understand to the roundabout, Roach has called for another meet		penciled in for the intersection of state Route 169 and Southeast 416th Street - citizens offered a
and "T-bone" type accidents. Instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular path frincips a junction.  The Department of Transportation arrived at the roundabout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the scene of too many accidents. DOT engineers opted for a roundabout plan fill for the provided of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose distort koes in all of the Enurschus Plateau, is especially pserved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentally.  She rails against meeting path stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from railying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting	and "T-bone" type accidents. Insisted of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular path through a junction.  The Department of Transportation arrived at the roundabout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the scene of too many accidents, DOT engineers opted for a roundabout inspect of indicit lights and find tablen early signs in the project before the public god wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, renain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The borton line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The sensett, whose desired the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senset has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rais against meeting rath stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from railying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wante.  In response to the DOTs lates that stendents regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, I will be a true pub	and "T-bone" type accidents. Instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular path through a junction.  The Department of Transportation arrived at the roundabout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the scene of too many accidents. DOT engineers opted for a roundabout plan through the providence of the public of the public of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her letter rever promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the Issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East sadt, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The parantor, whose discits takes in all of the Enumclav Plateau, is especially pervend that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting, Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gravet."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentally.  She ratia against meeting that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives pread throughout a room. That keeps a group from railying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the OTs latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has	and "T-bone" type accidents. Instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow a circular park through a juncific.  The Department of Transportation arrived at the roundabout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the scene of too many accidents. DOT angineers opted for a roundabout plan after determining the SR 169 intersection had been the scene of two many accidents. DOT angineers opted for a roundabout plan and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday aftermoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the Issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue hurther. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  The bestome line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senatior, whose district takes in all of the Enumdaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT'has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  Tresent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She raits against meetings hat stetch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from railying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the Foundabou		received by Roach - left on an answering machine by Transportation official Russ East, makes it intersection had been the scene of too many accidents. DOT engines opted for a roundabout instead of traffic lights and had taken early steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, is said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumciave Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting, Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from railying and ganing momentum, she said, alleging that sexadory what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has me twice so far.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation working Group, which has the true to pla	intersection had been the scene of too many accidents. DOT engineers opted for a roundabout instead of trafficights and that laken early steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After 'a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the inference of the inference	intersection had been the scene of too many accidents. DOT engineers opted for a roundabout instead of trafficights and that laken early steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After 'a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the inference of the inference	intersection had been the scene of too many accidents. DDT engineers opted for a roundabout instead of traffic lights and staken early steps in the project before the public got wind of the DOT plan.  Roach and state Rep. Chris Hurst have been adamant, outspoken opponents of the roundabout concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After 'a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumdiav Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gave!."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from railying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the TOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, the all the surface of the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the		and "T-bone" type accidents. Instead of meeting at a traditional four-way intersection, autos follow concept.  It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either, we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gawel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that s'exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St. Kevin Hans	It seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gave!."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from railying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the DOT's talfers talterent regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. I'vell be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St. Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraid-com.	the seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her letter never promised the roundatiout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundatiout is the best solution for the intersection.  The bottom line is they still want a roundatiout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it arryway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundatiout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting, Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from railying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundatiout, Roach has called for another meeting, I will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to isten.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw. Washinpton, a community. Southeast of Seattle, Address: P.O. Box 167 167 Cox S. Enumday. WA 98022. Phones: 369.825-2555. East: 369-825-1002.	the seemed the idea had been scrapped when Hurst received a letter from the DOT's Lorena Eng. Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The meant Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from railying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met wice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw. Washington, a community Southeast of Seatils. Addres		intersection had been the scene of too many accidents. DOT engineers opted for a roundabout instead of traffic lights and had taken early steps in the project before the public got wind of the
Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday aftermoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOTs thinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue urther. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, it will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St. Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.	Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, "remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gave.!"  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She ralls against meetings that strect hours sand have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's salest statements regarding the oundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, it will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT salest statements regarding the said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT salests to listen.  "We have the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roac	Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, "remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gave.!"  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She ralls against meetings that strect hours sand have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's salest statements regarding the oundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, it will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT salest statements regarding the said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT salests to listen.  "We have the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roac	Her letter never promised the roundabout idea was dead, however.  The recent Friday afternoon message from East to Roach confirmed the DOT's thinking on the issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, I will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St. Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierherald-com.  "Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herial is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washinglon, a community Southeast of Seattle.
After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, I will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St. Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.	After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from railying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met wice so far.  In response to the DOT statest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT statfers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.	After 'a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  It resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gave!."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from railying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the DOT's talest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St. Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.	issue.  After "a lot of discussion and further investigation," East said, the DOT wants to debate the issue further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St. Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.
further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottorn line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting, Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, I will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St. Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.  """  Reader comments:	further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottorn line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stratch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St. Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierherald.com.  Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw. Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: PO. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw. Wasbington. a community Southeast of Seattle.	further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St. Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.	further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for the intersection.  "The bottom line is they still want a roundabout," Roach said. "They're moving forward with it anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the POT wants.  In response to the POT wants.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St. Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierherald.com.  """  Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Ools St. Enumclaw, WA 88022 Phones: 360-825-2555 Fax: 360-825-5055
anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentally.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the toundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.	anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the tourndabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.  ""Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw. Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumdaw. WA 88022 Phone: 360-825-2555 Fax: 360-825-1859	anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, it will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.  Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax: 360-825-1092	anyway. That's what this amounts to."  The senator, whose district takes in all of the Enumclaw Plateau, is especially peeved that the DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentallity.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's altest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.		further. Department engineers, he said, remain convinced the roundabout is the best solution for
DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from railying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierherald.com.	DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.  "Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address.: P.O. Box 167 (1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone: 360-325-2555 Pax: 360-325-1092	DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the DOT wants.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.  ""Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Soattle.  Addresss: P.O. Box 157 (1827 Cole St. Enumdaw, WA 88022 Phone: 360-825-2555 Fax: 360-825-1092	DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier meeting.  "I resent the fact that he (East) didn't get the answer he wanted, so he's coming back again," she said.  East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT slatest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle, Address-: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone: 369-365-5555 Fax: 360-825-1092
East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.	East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address: P.O. Box 157 1527 Cole St. Enumday. WA 98022 Phone: 360-825-2555 Fax: 360-825-1092	East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, it will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2565 Fax:: 360-825-1092	East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.  "Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, it will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.  """  Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone: 360-825-2555 Fax: 360-825-1092		DOT has not considered the opinions of those who spoke against the roundabout at an earlier
"Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.	"Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, I will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St. Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.  Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-3825-2555 Fax:: 360-3825-1092	"Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, I will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St. Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.  Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-3825-2555 Fax:: 360-3825-1092	"Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."  The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.  Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092
The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.	The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1827 Cole St. Enumdaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092	The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle, Address: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-925-2555 Fax:: 360-925-1092	The senator has long criticized the manner in which the DOT hosts its public sessions, likening the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, it will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.  Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-25555 Fax:: 360-825-1092		East suggested another public meeting. Roach agrees, but wants it on her terms.
the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.	the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumdaw, WA 98022 Phone: 360-825-2555 Fax: 360-825-1092	the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumdaw, WA 98022 Phone: 360-825-2555 Fax: 360-825-1092	the strategy to a "divide and conquer" mentality.  She rails against meetings that stretch over several hours and have DOT representatives spread throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, I will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-25555 Fax:: 360-825-1092		"Either we will hold the meeting or they will hold the meeting," she said. "So I'm going to hold the gavel."
throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:	throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1827 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092	throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumdaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092	throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging that's exactly what the DOT wants.  In response to the roundabout plan and other issues, Roach created the Plateau Transportation Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting, it will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle, Address: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092
Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:	Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1827 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092	Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 88022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax: 360-825-1092	Working Group, which has met twice so far.  In response to the DOT's latest statements regarding the roundabout, Roach has called for another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092		throughout a room. That keeps a group from rallying and gaining momentum, she said, alleging another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:	another meeting, It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1827 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092	another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1827 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone: 360-825-2555 Fax: 360-825-1092	another meeting, It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak and require DOT staffers to listen.  "I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.  The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092
The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:	The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092	The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092	The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.  Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092		another meeting. It will be a true public meeting, she said, one which allows the public to speak
Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom  Reader comments:	Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.   Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1827 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022	Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.  Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092	Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.  Reader comments:  The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone: 360-825-2555 Fax: 360-825-1092		"I want the process to be fair and I want them to consider other safety options," Roach said.
Reader comments:	The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022	The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092	The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022		The session is planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 26 in the Enumclaw Public Library, 1700 First St.
	The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022	The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022	The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092		Kevin Hanson can be reached at khanson@courierheraldcom.
The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.	The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-925-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092  Convright © 2007 The Courier-Herald, All Richst Served.	The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092  Copyright © 2007 The Courier-Herald. All Rights Reserved.	The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022   Phone:: 380-825-2555   Fax:: 380-825-1092   Copyright © 2007 The Courier-Herald. All Rights Reserved.		Reader comments:
The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.	The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-255 Fax:: 360-825-1092 Coovright © 2007 The Courier-Herald. All Rights Reserved.	The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022   Phone:: 360-825-2555   Fax:: 360-825-1092   Copyright © 2007 The Courier-Herald. All Rights Reserved.	The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092  Copyright © 2007 The Courier-Herald. All Rights Reserved.
The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.	The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-555 Fax:: 360-825-1092 Coovright © 2007 The Courier-Herald. All Rights Reserved.	The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022   Phone:: 360-825-2555   Fax:: 360-825-1092   Copyright © 2007 The Courier-Herald. All Rights Reserved.	The Enumclaw Courier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Southeast of Seattle.  Address:: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone:: 360-825-2555 Fax:: 360-825-1092  Copyright © 2007 The Courier-Herald. All Rights Reserved.
	Copyright © 2007 The Courier-Herald, All Rights Reserved.	Copyright © 2007 The Courier-Herald. All Rights Reserved.	Copyright © 2007 The Courier-Herald. All Rights Reserved.	The Enumclaw Co	urier Herald is a weekly paper published every Wednesday in Enumclaw, Washington, a community Stress: P.O. Box 157 1627 Cole St. Enumclaw, WA 98022 Phone: 360-825-2555 Fax: 360-825	Southeast of Seattle.

King County Government Roundabouts For Fish To Go in near me, see below.

- One country block from another one in a ditch that is dry most of the year.
- · A ditch that used to be cleaned out and deep, now left to over fill and over flow, because of green insanity.
- Average cost is over $500,000 plus City of Enumclaw cost to move water lines, plus additional utilities cost as necessary plus disruption of water, roads and possibly others services plus us rural folks pay for this gangrene nonsense
- Compliments of King County, WA State DFW, Federal ESA and other green pandering nonsense.

SE 416th and 244th Ave SE looking west

Looking north on 244Ave SE.
This used to be a clear 5-6' deep ditch to handle the rainy season.
WA State and King Country environmental pandering insanity ignores this until it floods over the intersection. Then they propose another green taking, a $500,000 concrete fish roundabout.